Download Direct Link The official photo App from Google of Adobe Photoshop Lightroom An elegant way to organize your images Beautyplus - magic room Apply beautiful effects to photos Edit and animated videos on your smartphone image A super fun modification a fun way To take selfie take the most out the photos taken with your Android a professional photograph editor of ok first some things. The images you see in the gallery are stored in the phone memory or in an SDCard. The images stored in folders activities within your app (Eclipse Resources Folder) are for internal apps, when the APK is Build you cannot put anything in there. What you want is to associate some image with your application when it is running so there is no ways to do it just select the for you. First you need to open the image gallery from your app for intent, something similar: // constant to cause Private Static Int Result load Image = 1 Compare; // intent that call the tunnel I intent = new intent (intent.action_pick, data); // If everything is ok and an image, if you select (requestcode == results_load_image && ResultCode == RESULT_OK && null = data!) { // Gets the path of the URI SelectedImage image = Data.getData (); String [] filepathcolumn = {} mediastore.images.media.data; Cursor cursor = GetContentResolver () Query (SelectedImage, FilePathComponent, Null, Null); cursor.movetofirst (); int = columnindex cursor.getColumnindex (FilePathComponent [0]); String PicturePath = Cursor.getString (Columnindex); cursor.close (); // Show the image in your imageview imageview imageview = (imageview) findViewById (r.id.imageview); imageview.setImageBitmap (bitmapfactory.decodefile (picturespath)); } } OK, now that you have your image you want to decide what to do with it and this is the "loaded in my apk" I think you want. The image we have now is in memory or sdcard phone and now you have the path to this image. If you want to duplicate and store it in you application you can copy the image to the private application folder, change the image name and store the new path in the desired mode (sqlite, sharedprefs, change the name to a certain logic you can Get the image name, etc.) and now the image is "loaded" for your application. To obtain private application use folder.context.getfilesdir (). But once again I have the image file already, just do what you want with it. And be careful with permits. The other ways are Web to store images on a server, sqLite to store the image in a database. Database. data.
