The sites with power were already taken, but we can boondock and the pull-through sites were great. Lovely view of the lake with a gorgeous sunset. We wish we weren't just passing through and could stay more than overnight ($20). Pricing differential for NM residents ($15). Prices go up and online reservations begin May 1.SGreat rate for 30 A. I love to see the wild horses roaming the park.Site12Month of VisitOctoberCampgrounds easy to access. I did not have a site reservation, but there were lots of vacant pads available. Nice view of the lake. Only drawback was the all night incessant winds. They were strong, gusty and loud. So strong they collapsed my tent on top of me. Notmuch sleep that night. It might have been where I was (pad 44). They were still strong in the morning, but I noticed they were less/non existent at the campsites near the main entrance. Just beyawe and be prepared.JGreat campground. Not far off I-40.Lots of sites. Most have a level, gravel tent pad, table and fire ring. Vault toilets in abundance. One bathroom with sinks and flush toilets. Separate shower house was closed when we were here. Some electric sites. Some large level pull thrus. Most sites have at least a glimpse of the lake. There were horses roaming through the campground. Mostly empty this April midweek. Good trails for hiking. I only saw one water pump in the park. There is an EV charging station.Site74Month of VisitApril(4) View AllThe campsites are nice but not very level. If you're coming after November you need to be here before 5:00 or the gates are locked. The water was very infcted with blue green algae but also very pretty. The hikes are nice because the water is low you can walk all the way around the lake almost. Not very many electric sites but inexpensive if you get one.Not far from I40. Very quiet and beautiful lake view for only $8 (dry camping). Hook up optionally available.Site31Month of VisitOctober(4) View AllVarious campsite types at this lakeside park. Most are non electric but I got an electric site as it was hot. A few trails and a nice family atmosphere. Unfortunately lake was choked with algae (seasonal) so I didnt swim. Also some trash around. Good prices and sites though.SArea is very well maintained!Restrooms and showers were immaculate.Watch out for the wild horses and their droppings.Plenty of spots if youre sleeping in a hammock.Month of VisitJuneI offered s as my advise, check the fires before committing. Limited electric sites. I think more than 60% of sites were not level. Were self-leveling but took site B - dry camping, level and fitted between 2 ADA sites. We loved being so remote. Verizon/Visible/ Starlink all worked greatGreat staff. Patrolled by rangers frequently, so felt safe(8) View AllLake was muddy brown, not blue. First come, first served and we arrived before noon, but no electric sites were available. Views of lake and surrounding juniper covered mesas was good. Early in morning horses grazed right through our campsite.Sitecampsite was up on ridge.Month of VisitMayGood campsites. Clean showers and full hook ups as well as low key pull through sites.None of the sites are close to the water but only a short hike or drive. Catch release Tiger Muskie was the fishing my husband was after.Sitewe had lakeside view A and #34This place was fantastic. The rates are dirt cheap, but the park is worth many times more. I came in without a reservation and found a huge pull-through campsite on the hill, with a clear view of the lake (it is indeed blue). There was a deep and broad terrace for picnic table and tent, and some pines for shade. It was a little windy when I visited, but not uncomfortably so. It was dark and quiet at night, and I slept well.The bathroom nearest my campsite was a vault toilet, but a clean one. Real bathrooms are available at the visitor center, a long walk north of my tent. I recommend following the trail at the north end of the campground for a nice view of the dam (it was a 10 to 15 minute hike for me, narrow but level). The lake is also open for boating and fishing, with a launch ramp near the campground.The only downside I can think of was the trash I found at my campsite, mostly bottle caps. I spent a few minutes picking it up before I left.Site33Month of VisitJune(9) View AllAm was a dreamy March evening, Colton, Elliot, and Ed drove in to Bluewater lake state park at 9:30 PM. It was post staff hours but we were allowed to park outside and do an easy, flat hike into the camp site. Lots of clean, empty sites, plus clean bathroom. The campsite numbers were hard to find but its chill. Got super cold during this time of year at night, so come ready with hats, gloves, and sleeping pads.Siteorthside camp groundDSo we were very lucky that we decided to check out this campground, it is absolutely gorgeous! There was not a single other camper here so we got a nice level spot with power. It was a bit cold, got down to 15, there was some leftover snow in some spots but nothing that was a problem. Last night something was bugging the dogs so I looked outside to see a herd of wild horses grazing next to our camper! There are lots of good hiking trails. The water is still on here and the dump stations are open if needed.Site14Month of VisitJanuary(4) View AllAt first we thought we were the only ones here. The bathrooms were closed and locked. Didnt care for the outhouse (not the name they were called).REasy off the 40. Sites are a little close for me. Only vault toilets are open. Only around 15 electric sites and most aren't level. But the views and sunsets are beautiful. The water is nice. Only 5 other campers here. Paid $14.00. Well worth that.Site6Month of VisitNovemberLooked like a cool place to stay, but when we arrived at 5:45pm the gate was locked!!Not sure why they need a gate, but it closes at 5pm in the off seasonDVery clean and warm showers. Vault toilets are very clean as well. A lot of very scenic campsites. Some well shaded with juniper and pinion trees.Site69Month of VisitOctoberLovely clean campground. $10 for non reserved, or $8 for on the shore. Large sites, some reserved sites have electricity.Sitefirst come first served at North point CampgroundBThe camp sites are well laid out with picnic table. The bath room was primitive and I didnt check out the showers. The lake and the area is enchanting!! It was my first visit to New Mexico and for sure I will be back! The lake is large and has fishing.Site42Month of VisitAugustGreat for fishing, camp sites have easy access, a d easy boatlaunchGreat area to camp in although it is monsoon season so we got rained out for six hours the first night. This park has a lot of campsites primitive, no electr, electric, full hook ups, seen a lot of RVs parked right next to the lake. They have showers facilities with warm water, bathrooms located throughout the park.Siteelakeside primitiveMonth of VisitJuly(4) View AllKvery nice park & camping area. Wild horses & jack rabbits present. We dispersed & parked our truck camper right on the shoreline for $8. The hook up sites over looked the water (paved pad, pavilion, fire ring, 30&50 amp electric) bathrooms, showers, dump station.Boat ramp. Nice Pike and Muskie for the anglers.(5) View AllBeautiful lake, wonderful views, great staff, and spacious sites. Wished there were a bit more trees though. Will be going back when we can.Site14, upper electric loopMonth of VisitJune(7) View AllWe stayed away from lake because of our dogs. They tend to bark if people go by. The space was nice but the sites were too close for us. I preferred more space for privacy but were new to RVing, so perhaps this is normal. Park Ranger was very nice and helped us settle in. The view from the canyon and hills was beautiful. Im not sure well stay again because wed like more space and water hookups. But other than that, it was a beautiful spot!(5) View AllThis is a wonderful campground. Our site (A) was perfectly level on a concrete pad. The site came with a large fire ring conveniently located in the rear part of the concrete pad and a picnic table covered with a roofed shelter. The site was clean, spacious, and even though it was not a lake side site, it had a beautiful view of the lake. Right now Im watching a mix of snow and rain create a misty and magical landscape. My Verizon service varies from 2 - 4 bars. I would definitely stay here again!!!SiteAMonth of VisitAprilUncrowded when we were there State park located right on a man-made lake. unfortunately, the lake level is extremely low! Decent sites each with picnic table and fire pit some with shade canopies others with a little natural tree cover, not a lot of privacy. Pit toilets, no drinking water available except at maybe the RV sites with hookups and at the pump outstation? Weak cell signal. Seems more suited for RV's.pFishing, camping, hiking! During Pinon season you can expect some yummy seeds!Month of VisitFebruaryThere arent many electric sites if thats important to you and some say theyre no level. Ours was Found this campsite heading west on I-40 on a memorial day weekend road trip last minute. Had 40 designated campsites with about 1/2 reservable online and 1/2 first come first serve. They also allow dispersed camping along the lake and there were probably 50+ groups of people in RVs and trailers comfortably spaced.Wild horses roaming around the lake were also pretty cool.We took a designated campsite overlooking the lake and added this park to the list of places to return to.(9) View All Save up to 25% on your family travel costs in 2021 by booking an RV through RVshare Find Cheap RV Rentals rvshare.com Devils Fork State Park campground is along the shore of Lake Jocassee. Learn More harvesthosts.com New Mexico > Bluewater Lake State Park Bluewater Lake is one of 16 state parks in New Mexico based around a reservoir, offering the usual range of water-based recreation including fishing, boating, swimming and shoreline camping; this is a popular place to stay, due to the pleasant scenery and proximity to Interstate 40. In these respects the park is similar to all the others but has one added attraction of the cliff-lined canyon of Bluewater Creek, below the dam - the stream flows through a succession of pretty pools, lined by rich vegetation with many wildflowers, and may be viewed along a partial loop trail. The main fish species in the lake are tiger muskie, channel catfish, rainbow trout and cutthroat trout. The waters freeze in winter, when ice fishing becomes a popular activity. Bulrushes and other vegetation, Bluewater Creek Away from the canyon, the lake is surrounded by low, rolling hills, partly covered by pinon and juniper pines, elevation around 7,500 feet, and it is situated around 20 miles east of the continental divide. Rocks beside a pool, Bluewater Creek Bluewater Lake was formed in 1920 by construction of a dam across the creek, at a point where it leaves a relatively wide valley and enters the much narrower canyon, causing the water to flood about one mile of the stream, to the south, and a rather longer distance to the west, along the tributary of Cottonwood Creek - usually around three miles, or up to six miles at times of high water levels. Both streams are fed mainly by run-off from the nearby Zuni Mountains, land within the Cibola National Forest. Shoreline track, from the campground to the dam The state park occupies only a small part of the lake, at its east end, including the dam and 1.5 miles of the Bluewater Creek canyon. The park is accessed by a paved road, Hwy 412, which leaves I-40 at Prewitt, exit 63, crosses a range of hills then descends into the Bluewater Creek valley, through a residential area and on towards the lake, past the various camping areas. There are 149 sites available, 14 with electricity, while primitive beach camping is also permitted. Other facilities are a playground, visitor center, picnic areas, boat dock and launch ramp. Reflections on a pool, Bluewater Creek At the end of the campground road, a short trail continues south, climbing gently to a viewpoint overlooking the Bluewater Dam, atop a small hill. The main trail though is the 1.5 mile route into the canyon, starting in the middle of the campground, this descends 150 feet, the route a little difficult to follow in places, down to the overgrown canyon floor and across the creek to a junction, where one branch heads upstream for 0.8 miles, ending at the base of the dam, while the other fork goes down the creek, crossing it again, later rising up a side ravine and meeting a road (Jessica Lane) near the campground. All rocks in the canyon, and along the south shore of the lake, are layered, brownish limestone from the San Andres Formation, providing an attractive backdrop to the clear waters of the creek and the lush green vegetation. Bluewater Dam Bluewater Lake - Similar Places Cave Lake State Park, Nevada - remote reservoir enclosed by wooded hills with limestone rock formationsWashoe Lake State Park, Nevada - south and eastern shoreline of a large lake at the foot of the Sierra Nevada New Mexico, New Mexico.Bluewater Lake State Park was established in 1955. Bluewater and Cottonwood Creeks feed the lake. This serene lake, located 25 miles west of Grants, is set in a pinon-juniper landscape with views towards the 3,000 acres of wilderness on the north flank of the Zuni Mountains. A forest of cottonwoods, pinon, and juniper surrounds the lake. From Pinon Hills Campground, take the trail to the overlook above the historic 1920s Bluewater Creek Dam, which is an arched concrete dam that was privately built. Explore the history of Bluewater Lake at the park's Visitor Center where you will be greeted by park staff and volunteers. Learn about Navajo Native American culture, history, artifacts and native wild horses. Domestic horseback riding is allowable throughout the park's 2,500 acres.
